FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 27.

THE CROP PROSPECT. -The bountiful rain of the past week came just in time to avert a serious drought. The wheat, grass and young elever had begun to show signs of failing, but each are now greatly improved; the wheat has Levertheless, been seriously injured. The corn which had been placted early is now suffering from depredations of cut worm, and many of our farmers have been compelled to replant. There is at present the greatest abandance of tobecco plants, and small plantings have already been made by a few of our farmers. There seems to be a favorable prospect for all kinds of fruit, except peaches, most of which seem to have been killed by the cold winter. The blackberries have suffered in a similar manner .- Marlboro, Md., Gazette.
